Section A- Reading

I. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow:

The roar began at the back of the crowd and swept like fire in heavy growing crescendo until it seemed to toss thousands of hats above their heads. The band in the courtyard struck up the Mexican national air, and Villa came walking down the street.

He was dressed in an old plain khaki uniform, with several buttons lacking. He hadn't recently shaved, wore no hat, and his hair had not been brushed. He walked a little pigeon-toed, humped over, with his hands in his trousers pockets. As he entered the aisle between the rigid lines of soldiers he seemed slightly embarrassed, and grinned and nodded to a friend here and there in the ranks. At the foot of the grand staircase, Governor Chao and Secretary of State Terrazzas joined him in full-dress uniform. The band threw off all restraint, and, as Villa entered the audience chamber, at a signal from someone in the balcony of the palace, the great throng in the Plaza de Armas uncovered, and all the brilliant crowd of officers in the room saluted stiffly. It was Napoleonic!

Villa hesitated for a minute, pulling his mustache and looking very uncomfortable, finally gravitated toward the throne, which he tested by shaking the arms, and then sat down, with the Governor on his right and the Secretary of State on his left.

Señor Bauche Alcalde stepped forward and pronounced a short discourse, indicting Villa for personal bravery on the field on six counts, which he mentioned in florid detail. He was followed by the Chief of Artillery, who said: "The army adores you. We will follow you wherever you lead. You can be what you desire in Mexico." Then three other officers spoke in the high-flung, extravagant periods necessary to Mexican oratory. They called him "The Friend of the Poor," "The Invincible General," "The Inspirer of Courage and Patriotism," "The Hope of the Indian Republic." And through it all Villa slouched on the throne, his mouth hanging open, his little shrewd eyes playing around the room. Once or twice he yawned, but for the most part he seemed to be speculating, with some intense interior amusement, like a small boy in church, what it was all about. He knew, of course, that it was the proper thing, and perhaps felt a slight vanity that all this conventional ceremonial was addressed to him. But it bored him just the same.

Finally, with an impressive gesture, Colonel Servin stepped forward with the small pasteboard box which held the medal. General Chao nudged Villa, who stood up. The officers applauded violently; the crowd outside cheered; the band in the court burst into a triumphant march.

Villa put out both hands eagerly, like a child for a new toy. He could hardly wait to open the box and see what was inside. An expectant hush fell upon everyone, even the crowd in the square. Villa looked at the medal, scratching his head, and, in a reverent silence, said clearly: "This is a hell of a little thing to give a man for all that heroism you are talking about!" And the bubble of Empire was pricked then and there with a great shout of laughter.

II A. On the basis of your reading of the passage and other visual inputs, choose the correct option to answer the questions which follow:

The rapid transition to online learning, as a consequence of COVID-19, has highlighted the risks of student disengagement, and the subsequent impact on lower student achievement across multiple courses.

1. The recent pandemic has changed how millions around the globe are educated. New solutions and innovations in the education system are the need of the hour. Looking at the new digital split, the approach may increase the equality gaps. More than 500 million students across the globe had to pause their on-going studies at various levels. These changes have and will create a degree of inconvenience, but at the same time would promote innovations and future transformations within the education system.
2. The 'pile-on effect' of the coronavirus is that, during the global COVID-19 pandemic, interruptions to education can have long term implications — especially for the most vulnerable. There is a real risk of regression for children whose basic, foundational learning (reading, math, languages, etc.) was not strong to begin with. And millions of children who have already been deprived of their right to education, particularly girls, are being more exposed to health and well-being risks (both psychosocial and physical) during COVID-19-
3. Girls: Young and adolescent girls are twice as likely to be out of school in crisis situations and face greater barriers to education and vulnerabilities such as domestic/gender-based violence when not in school.
4. Refugees, displaced and migrant children: These populations often fall between the cracks as national policies might not necessarily include these vulnerable groups and they must be included and catered for in any global responses to this crisis if this has not already occurred.
5. Children and youth with disabilities: Along with other marginalized populations, including children from minority groups, are neglected in the best of times and have lower educational outcomes than their peers.
6. Young people affected by trauma or mental health issues: Schools and learning centers are places for communities to address health related issues, including mental health and psychosocial support (MHPSS), which the most vulnerable students rely on for their wellbeing and development in order to learn.

The graphic above, made by the consulting firm CB&A, shows how the adaption curve typically impacts in the online learning method users.

Q 11 With the recent shift to online education, the world saw-

- A decreasing trend in school drop outs
- A decreasing trend in student accomplishments
- Decreased challenges in innovations
- Decreased investments in education sector

Q 12 According to the adaption curve, people fastest to adjust were the-

- Pragmatics & Enthusiasts
- Visionaries & Conservatives
- Visionaries & Enthusiasts
- Pragmatics & Conservatives

Q 13. Online classes were advantageous for some learners due to-

- Self-paced courses
- family interactions
- Cost efficiency
- Reduced commuting

- i, ii, iii
- ii, iii, iv
- i, ii, iv
- i, iii, iv

Q 14. Which of the underlined words in the sentence can be replaced by 'disengagement' to bring out its usage as applied in the text above-

- He stopped and gazed off at the distant hills.
- His air of detachment lost him many friends.
- He mumbled in delirium all night.
- He was startled and gave a discordant shriek.

Q 15. Which of the following is a synonym of 'aggravation'- (para 2)

- a. Innovation
- b. Achievement
- c. Inconvenience
- d. Pandemic

Q 16. 'Pragmatists' refers to-

- a. Someone who is irrational

II B. Read the passage given below and answer the questions which follow- (Any six)

Philosophy of Education is a label applied to the study of the purpose, process, nature, and ideals of education. It can be considered a branch of both philosophy and education. Education can be defined as the teaching and learning of specific skills, and the imparting of knowledge, judgment, and wisdom, and is something broader than the societal institution of education we often speak of.

1. Many educationalists consider it a weak and woolly field, too far removed from the practical applications of the real world to be useful. But philosophers dating back to Plato and the Ancient Greeks have given the area much thought and emphasis, and there is little doubt that their work has helped shape the practice of education over the millennia.
2. Plato is the earliest important educational thinker, and education is an essential element in "The Republic" (his most important work on philosophy and political theory, written around 360 B.C.). In it, he advocates some rather extreme methods: removing children from their mothers' care and raising them as wards of the state, and differentiating children suitable to the various castes, the highest receiving the most education, so that they could act as guardians of the city and care for the less able. He believed that education should be holistic, including facts, skills, physical discipline, music, and art. Plato believed that talent and intelligence are not distributed genetically and thus is be found in children born to all classes, although his proposed system of selective public education for an educated minority of the population does not really follow a democratic model.
3. Aristotle considered human nature, habit, and reason to be equally important forces to be cultivated in education, the ultimate aim of which should be to produce good and virtuous citizens. He proposed that teachers lead their students systematically, and that repetition be used as a key tool to develop good habits, unlike Socrates' emphasis on questioning his listeners to bring out their own ideas. He emphasized the balancing of the theoretical and practical aspects of subjects taught, among which he explicitly mentions reading, writing, mathematics, music, physical education, literature, history, and a wide range of sciences, as well as play, which he also considered important.

4. During the Medieval period, the idea of Perennialism was first formulated by St. Thomas Aquinas in his work "De Magistro". Perennialism holds that one should teach those things deemed to be of everlasting importance to all people everywhere, namely principles and reasoning, not just facts (which are apt to change over time), and that one should teach first about people, not machines or techniques. It was originally religious in nature, and it was only much later that a theory of secular perennialism developed.
5. During the Renaissance, the French skeptic Michel de Montaigne (1533 – 1592) was one of the first to critically look at education. Unusually for his time, Montaigne was willing to question the conventional wisdom of the period, calling into question the whole edifice of the educational system, and the implicit assumption that university-educated philosophers were necessarily wiser than uneducated farmworkers, for example.

Q11. Major difference between the approaches of Socrates and Aristotle was-

- a. Aristotle felt the need for rote-learning; Socrates emphasized on dialogic learning
- b. Aristotle felt the need for interminable learning; Socrates felt that students need to be perpetually challenged
- c. Aristotle believed in virtuous citizens; Socrates believed in implausible thinkers
- d. Aristotle emphasized on the importance of paying attention to human nature; Socrates emphasized upon rationality

Q12. Educationists consider philosophy a 'weak and woolly' field as-

- a. It is not rational or pragmatic
- b. Its theoretical concepts are uncomplicated
- c. It is irrelevant for education
- d. Its not evolving with time

Q13. What do you understand by the term 'Perennialism', in the context of the given comprehension passage?

- a. It refers to something which no longer exists
- b. It refers to something which is quite unnecessary
- c. It refers to something which is abstract and theoretical
- d. It refers to something which is of ceaseless importance

Q14. Why did Aquinas propose a model of education which did not lay much emphasis on facts?

- a. Facts at times are irrelevant
- b. Facts do not lead to holistic education
- c. Facts change with the changing times
- d. Facts are frozen in time

Q15. Were Plato's beliefs about education democratic?

- a. He believed that only the rich have the right to acquire education
- b. He believed in democracy but his practices didn't suggest the same
