Manuchehr succeeded to his father Iraj to the royal Iranian throne. From the beginning of the empire, he fought against the Turanians, the ancient enemies of Iran, and gained victories. But the Turanians did not sit idle and became full of revenge against Iran. Once Afrasyab invaded Iran and passed by Jayhoon. He trampled the soil of Iran under the hooves of his horses, and he overpassed Mazandaran. Manuchehr resisted it. But the enemy was formidable and had countless army, Manuchehr took refuse in Amul. The Turanian soldiers surrounded the city and blocked the way to escape for Manuchehr. The Iranians lost hope of victory and were in grief due to shame of defeat.

B

As it was night, I returned to the guest house, next morning having eaten breakfast I went to see Chahal Sotun. The garden with green trees has surrounded the building. Chahal Sotun from front with twenty tall red wooden pillars was reminding of the Takht-i- Jamshed. The water pool which is in front of it reflected the next twenty pillars on the water. The hall of Chahal Sotun is located on the top of the edifice.

C

Now if we compare the nations with a big family; we shall see that they like members of a family sometimes all live in peace together with each other and sometimes on the flimsy pretexts of differences they start fighting. This conflict among nations become acute and lead to blady quarrels which is called war.

8. Explain the following four couplets in English/Hindi/Urdu. 5+5=10 Marks

A

The literal meaning of this couplet is "I am an artist friend who gives benefit and does not cause loss". In this couplet the poet is talking about the benefits of reading a book. He says that book is an artist friend of readers. It gives profit to its readers and does not cause loss to them.

В

The seasons are the signs of the benevolence of God. They are for our peace and comfort. The poet tells his readers that different seasons bring boons of God to mankind. Nature shows its love and care for humanity through various seasons round the year. These seasons provide man with peace and comforts.

This couplet speaks about the companionship with book. Anyone who reads book, it gives plenty of advises and a book is good friend. As the friend gives wise counsel at the time of need to his friend, so the book also knows many fine lessons of life and can impart them to its readers.

The above couplet explains the significance of seasons in a year. Every season marks an occasion. The autumn is an important season of the year. As the autumn begins, all the schools begin to open. Autumn or fall is the season that marks the commencement of academic life all over the world. All the educational institutions start working from the beginning of the autumn.
